SIGNIFICANT UPDATES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

- Today, Adrian Dix, Minister of Health, issued a statement on enhancements to services and hiring for Northern Health.<sup>5</sup> Highlights include the following:
  - The B.C. Government is “providing up to $6.38 million for programs and incentives to encourage more health workers to discover the advantages of working and living in the North.”
  - “The comprehensive health-care worker rural retention program for targeted communities and occupations is designed to offer financial incentives and support for priority health-care workers and will be funded by government at approximately $3 million.”
  - “Further projects are underway through partnerships between Northern Health and the Province:
    - $821,000 to continue the Travel Resource Program (TRP), which supports more than 40 registered nurses (RN) and licensed practical nurses (LPN).
    - Offering a flexible community fund of $115,000 that supports patient care delivery to support interdisciplinary teams and the health authority to work together and create a unique approach to address rural obstetrics needs and support 24/7 care for their communities, and helps stabilize care in the northwest (Mills Memorial Hospital in Terrace).
    - $225,000 in funding to develop a child care program to support expanded net new child care spots and expanded hours of operation to meet the needs of health-care workers who are often working 12-hour shifts. Anticipated regions for this include: Kitimat, Hazelton, Prince Rupert, Chetwynd, Dawson Creek and Fort St. John.
    - $750,000 to develop a housing program in communities where suitable market housing is barrier to permanent staffing and short-term deployments. Regions include Robson Valley, Kitimat, Hazelton, Prince Rupert, Chetwynd, Dawson Creek and Fort St. John.
    - Launching the Rural Urgent Doctor in-aid (RUDi) 24/7 virtual support pathway for doctors and other health-care professionals in rural communities, with $825,000 in government funding.
    - $645,000 is geared toward creating clinical management supports for Prince Rupert and the northeast that will build capacity to support new graduates, provides more resources for management competency development and improves management support systems.”
